RadioShack Stores Become First National Collection Site for Used Wireless Phones

Phones refurbished and donated to aid domestic violence victims

Fort Worth, Texas – Oct. 3, 2000 – RadioShack Corporation (NYSE: RSH) announced today that its 7,100 stores will serve as the first national collection site for consumers to donate used, inactive wireless phones in support of the Wireless Foundation's Donate a Phone program. RadioShack will accept used wireless phones and accessories between Oct. 1-31 in honor of National Domestic Violence Awareness month.

The Donate a Phone campaign provides domestic violence shelters, law enforcement agencies and other organizations working to fight domestic violence with refurbished wireless phones. The phones are preprogrammed with 911 and other emergency numbers so that domestic violence victims can access local emergency services and domestic violence hotline numbers at the touch of a button.

"The phones collected through this program provide a critical lifeline to domestic violence victims. So the more phones we can put in the hands of people in need, the better," said Laura Moore, vice president of public relations and corporate communications. "Because we are in virtually every neighborhood in America, we are perfectly positioned to provide an easy and convenient way for people to support the Wireless Foundation's efforts by dropping off their old wireless phones at our stores."

The Donate a Phone program was launched in September 1999 to collect and refurbish a portion of an estimated 24 million wireless phones that are no longer being used. During the last year, businesses, civic groups and grass roots organizations have donated almost 100,000 phones to the program. The goal of this nationwide program, sponsored by Motorola and the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, is to collect one million used wireless phones.

"It is the support of corporate partners like RadioShack that enable us to help the millions of women who are victims of domestic violence each year in the United States," said David Diggs, executive director of the Wireless Foundation. "We hope that Americans across the country will go into their local RadioShack store and donate wireless phones they are no longer using in support of our efforts to assist these victims."

Any wireless phone in any condition or age will be accepted. Consumers can bring their wireless phones to RadioShack and a store associate will provide a receipt for the tax deductible donation to the Wireless Foundation.
